Charles E. Young, chancellor of the University of California, Los Angeles, and chair of the NCAA Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship, speaks to members of the media at a news conference June 3 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Committee wants more time to study I-A football playoff

The NCAA Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship has concluded that while merit exists for the concept of a playoff, the committee cannot at this time recommend specific legislation to the NCAA Presidents Commission and NCAA Council.

Charles E. Young, chancellor of the University of California, Los Angeles, and chair of the special committee, said the committee proposes further study of issues that time constraints prevented it from addressing adequately during its two meetings.

"The special committee has spent considerable time and effort studying and discussing a significant amount of data, including hundreds of pages of statistics and history," Young said at the conclusion of the committee's June 2-3 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri. "Our extensive discussions of those data have brought up many complex issues and concerns that demand further consideration."

Young said he believes that conflicts relating to a playoff can be resolved, although he said the committee has not had enough time to address the issues satisfactorily or to discuss the matter adequately with member institutions, student-athletes and other interested parties. The June 2-3 meeting was the second for the special committee, which also met in early May. From January through

CFA seeks new division of power in I-A football

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

DALLAS — Realignment of NCAA Division I-A and a possible football playoff for the division were the dominant themes of the College Football Association's annual meeting June 3-5.

A group of faculty athletics representatives attending the meeting voted for CFA sponsorship of proposals at the 1995 NCAA Convention that would enact a Division I-A commissioners' proposal for restructuring and a "Division IV" proposal giving Division I-A institutions more autonomy over matters relating to football.

"Division IV would have control over the football programs," Daniel G. Gibbens, professor of law and faculty athletics representative at the University of Oklahoma, said during a panel discussion entitled "NCAA Restructuring." "What we really are talking about when we talk about control is money. The old Division IV proposal has some interesting features to it. The group that will be in control will be us — the schools that are generating the money."

Former NCAA President Albert M. Witte, professor of law and faculty athletics representative at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, said that in order for Division I-A institutions to gain more control over their athletics programs' future, those institutions must make a vocal pitch for realignment.

"We want to control our own destiny," Witte said. "The problem is (that) we don't say who 'we' is. Who decides who makes us the 'we?' Somebody in I-A has to make a commitment that we know who 'we' is. Who's in? Who's out? That, I think, is a big problem.

"If I-A wants to control its own destiny, a large percentage of I-A chancellors must strongly endorse restructuring. Secondly, they should present their ideas as non-negotiable: Take it or leave it."

"It is time for this group of people to take charge," said Eugene F. Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference. "Since we're the ones putting the most into it...the time has come for us to take our role

Division I-A football

Committee to seek more time to assess playoff

The NCAA Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship has proposed further study of issues that time constraints prevented it from addressing adequately during its two meetings.

Charles E. Young, chancellor of the University of California, Los Angeles, and chair of the special committee, said he believes that conflicts relating to a playoff can be resolved. However, he said the committee has not had enough time to address the issues satisfactorily or to discuss the matter adequately with member institutions, student-athletes and other interested parties.

Young's comments came at the conclusion of a June 2-3 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri. He said there is little likelihood of football-playoff legislation at the January NCAA Convention; instead, the committee, which was to have been dissolved at the conclusion of this meeting, will ask the NCAA Joint Policy Board for an extension at the policy board's June 26-27 meeting in Kansas City. Assuming such an extension is granted, Young said a task force of the special committee's members would be assembled to study related issues before the full committee reconvenes.

Proposal No. 174

Committee to recommend new initial-eligibility rule

An NCAA special committee will recommend changes to 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16 and also will recommend a one-year delay in any new initial-eligibility legislation for Division I.

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards will seek changes in 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16, which requires a minimum grade-point average of 2.000 and an SAT score of 700 or an ACT score of 17. Proposal No. 16 is scheduled to become effective in August 1995.

The committee's recommendation will be forwarded to the NCAA Presidents Commission for its June 28-29 meeting and to the NCAA Council for its August 8-10 meeting. Any changes to Proposal No. 16 would have to be approved at the 1995 Convention.

For more information, see the June 1, May 25, May 4 and April 20 issues of The NCAA News.

Initial eligibility

Oklahoma resolution seeks elimination of clearinghouse

The Oklahoma Legislature passed a resolution May 27 that asks the U.S. Congress to prohibit the NCAA from requiring student-athletes to use a clearinghouse to establish initial eligibility in Divisions I and II sports.

A concurrent resolution also was approved asking other state legislatures to recommend to Congress that it prohibit the clearinghouse.

An $18 charge that is required of each student-athlete registering with the clearinghouse has been the most criticized part of the clearinghouse arrangement and has led some — including State Rep. Gary Bastin, the sponsor of the Oklahoma resolution — to conclude that the NCAA is profiting from the program.

However, the Association contributes about $500,000 annually to the operation of the clearinghouse, which (based on registration by about 100,000 athletes) is estimated to cost about $2.3 million annually to operate.

■ Briefly in the News

Students vote to fund athletics

Undergraduate students at the University of California, Davis, have agreed to foot the bill for the school's 23-sport intercollegiate athletics program, the future of which was in doubt after the institution's budgeting process called for a total withdrawal of state funds from athletics.

The Student Activities and Services Initiative was created to poll students on two proposed activity-fee increases to help fund the athletics program. The initiative also gave students the option of voting for no increase at all.

Slightly more than 52 percent of the students who voted chose the higher of the two activity-fee increases, which amounts to an additional $34 per quarter for the 1994-95 academic year and an extra $17 per quarter for the 1995-96 school year.

"We're excited that the students voted to save the program," said Keith Williams, acting athletics director at UC Davis. "We're relieved we can get on with our business, instead of being in limbo. This is a strong show of support on campus, and future students will benefit from this vote."

The increase in the student activity fee is expected to replace the $2 million in funds that will be lost under budgeting directives.

Other programs at UC Davis that will benefit from the initiative are its recreation hall, intramural sports, outdoor activities, cross-cultural center, equestrian center and women's center.

Sportsfest fun

Southern Methodist University swimmers (from left) Wayne Vacek, Ryan Berube, Anita Lee and Jeff Foley were among the 500 student-athletes from Southern Methodist to participate in the Spring Sportsfest at the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas. The event included basketball shooting, football throwing, golf putting, baseball pitching, bowling and face-painting. The Southern Methodist athletics department and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes have been cosponsors of the event for the last four years.

Jump start heart

The women's volleyball team at San Diego State University recently helped local elementary school students get a jump start for a healthy heart.

The team participated in a "Jump for Heart" fund-raiser, profits from which were earmarked for the American Heart Association. The wife of San Diego State volleyball coach Myles Gabel helped organize the event as a physical education teacher in the San Diego School District.

Gabel said he was searching for community-service projects in which his team could become involved. He said his players got just as much out of the event as the youngsters.

"I think they got a broader sense of responsibility," he said. "The kids really looked up to them. Most college students don't know how much they are looked up to in the community. The children really respected that they were there. It was well worth it."

Poem sans author?

Wade Watkins, who was a defensive coordinator for the football team at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Madison, before dying of meningitis and encephalitis before Christmas last year, was a published poet. He also collected motivational sayings — just as many coaches do.

His family wants to learn if the following poem was authored or borrowed by Watkins:

"Football is a game of character.
Players do whatever it may take.
But in the end, all players know
It's the hard that makes it great."

Watkins' family is publishing a book of his poems as part of his memorial fund. Anyone familiar with the poem is asked to contact William John Watkins at 1406 Garven Avenue, Ocean, New Jersey 07712.

Blood drive success

North Dakota State University and United Blood Services reports that their third annual blood drive helped collect 259 pints of blood from university faculty, staff, student-athletes and coaches. In addition, student-athletes were encouraged to recruit at least one potential volunteer for the program.

"This is a simple way to make a big difference in the Fargo community," said Lynn Dorn, coordinator of the project and women's athletics director at North Dakota State.

United Blood Services provides blood and blood products for patients at 50 hospitals in North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

■ News quiz

Answers to the following questions appeared in May issues of The NCAA News. How many can you answer?

1. True or false: Conferences can apply to the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee for permission to experiment during the 1994-95 season with use of one 20-second timeout per half in a game, in addition to the current number of timeouts permitted.

2. How many individuals have been inducted into the GTE Academic All-America Hall of Fame as honorary members (for achievements before the creation of the academic all-America program)? (a) 0; (b) 1; (c) 2; (d) 3.

3. True or false: Pennsylvania State University became the first team from outside California to win the National Collegiate Men's Volleyball Championship.

4. How many football bowl games have been recertified for 1994-95 by the NCAA? (a) 10; (b) 17; (c) 19; (d) 21.

5. What California institution has won the most NCAA team titles since fall 1989? (a) Stanford University; (b) California State University, Bakersfield; (c) University of California, Los Angeles; (d) Pomona-Pitzer Colleges.

6. How many host schools have won the team championship at the NCAA Division I Women's Tennis Championships? (a) 0; (b) 1; (c) 2; (d) 3.

7. Which Division III institution won NCAA team titles in two sports May 22? (a) Washington College (Maryland); (b) William Smith College; (c) Bridgewater State College (Massachusetts); (d) Trenton State College.

■ Fact file

For the first time in more than 12 years, average total enrollment (full time and part time) of undergraduate, degree-seeking students has declined. Overall, there was a slight decline of 1.7 percent from fall 1991 to fall 1992. However, since 1980, there has been an overall average increase of almost 15 percent in enrollment.

Source: "Summary Statistics: Annual Survey of Colleges, 1992-93 and 1993-94," a report based on the College Board's Annual Survey of Colleges.

Only 0.3 percent ruled ineligible in fall 1993 drug testing

Steroid use was detected in six of the 10 student-athletes who were ruled ineligible

Ten student-athletes out of 3,544 tested were ruled ineligible as the result of a positive NCAA drug test in fall 1993.

Of those showing a positive result, six were detected in the year-round testing program for football. Four of them tested positive for anabolic steroids (nandrolone and stanozolol) while the other two were ruled ineligible for failure to take the test.

The overall failure rate of 0.3 percent is comparable to the 0.2 percent failure rate for fall 1992.

Three of the remaining positive/ineligibles were detected in testing done at the Division II Football Championship. Two of those were for steroids (nandrolone and a testosterone-/epitestosterone ratio greater than 6 to 1) and one was for marijuana.

The remaining positive/ineligible test was at the Division II Men's Soccer Championship, for marijuana.

A total of 22 student-athletes tested positive (0.6 percent) but retained their eligibility when medical justification was documented, when an appeal was granted or until the results of a follow-up examination were provided. Of those 22, 21 were in football.

Frank D. Uryasz, NCAA director of sports sciences, said the Association does not attempt to interpret the results of the drug-testing program and that the results do not necessarily indicate that only 0.3 percent of all student-athletes are using drugs.

Any student-athlete failing the test is ineligible for at least one year after testing positive.

Product liability is in need of reform

By Julie Nimmons
SPORTING GOODS MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION

On June 24, the Senate will vote on an issue that potentially could stifle innovation within the sporting goods industry and thereby limit access to sports for athletes of all ages.

In a recent government-relations survey conducted by the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association, the national trade association of U.S. producers and distributors of sports apparel, athletics footwear and sporting goods equipment, product liability reform was cited as the most significant issue facing the industry.

Topping the list of the more than 35 industry issues, approximately 67 percent of the respondents named product liability as the highest priority facing the industry.

As chairman of the SGMA and chief executive officer of Schutt Sports Group in Litchfield, Illinois, I can personally attest to the way in which product liability law threatens our company, the entire sports goods manufacturing association and the livelihoods of hundreds of thousands of workers across the country.

Schutt and its subsidiary companies manufacture a variety of high-quality sports products in Illinois and Tennessee. We produce athletics equipment for football, baseball and basketball, primarily helmets and face guards and other protective gear and basketball goals and backboards.

In 1970, there were at least 18 companies manufacturing football helmets in this country. Today there are only two: Schutt and Riddell, Inc. Well-known sporting goods companies such as Wilson, Spalding and Rawlings no longer produce football helmets. The reason: product liability costs, soaring insurance premiums, exploding litigation expenses and the threat of excessive judgments literally drove most manufacturers to cease production.

To make the point even more clear, many of the companies that left the business never suffered an adverse judgment. They simply made a business decision that an irrational legal system left their companies with an unreasonable liability exposure. They were faced with potentially huge costs that they could not control, regardless of the safety or quality of their products.

We in the sporting goods manufacturing industry are under constant threat from

Money should aid current athletes

Letters

I have just read the guest editorial on "Postgraduate grants merit more money" by Allen Sack (The NCAA News, May 18) in which he says the NCAA currently spends $625,000 on this program.

While I am all in favor of distribution of funds back to the student-athletes, I wish more attention could be given to those student-athletes still in competition and in undergraduate schools.

I have been a member of the NCAA Division III South regional advisory committee for baseball for a number of years. Each year, we have to select only four teams to participate in a regional playoff. There used to be a six-team double elimination playoff. Our region should still have a six-team tournament due to the number of truly quality teams. This would give another 50 student-athletes an NCAA tournament experience.

I believe the NCAA would better serve its member institutions by spending its funds on increasing student-athlete participation in its regional championships, which would benefit many, rather than on programs that benefit only a few.

Football money questioned

It is appalling to find a former commissioner of the Trans America Athletic Conference to be so ignorant about the financial situations of intercollegiate athletics. Lou McCullough believes that "football is the moneymaker for most Division I-A schools" (Opinions, The NCAA News, May 11).

According to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, "athletics officials estimate that only 20 of 106 Division I-A football programs operate at a profit" (August 3, 1993). If the University of Georgia makes millions in football, that is certainly an exception rather than the rule. By the way, McCullough mentions the revenue and not the cost of football programs.

As for performing under pressure, Suzanne Yoculan, Georgia's women's gymnastics coach, knows about it much better than Mr. McCullough could possibly imagine. Her team outdraws the men's basketball team by a wide margin.

Moreover, how much pressure does a football coach have? There is no other college sport in which as many as one-third of the teams advance to the postseason games, let alone one-sixth of them declared "champions."

Tomoaki Nomi
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Editor's note: The 1989 edition of "Revenues and Expenses of Intercollegiate Athletics Programs," the most recent comprehensive study of college athletics finances, shows that 55 percent of Division I-A football programs operated at a profit and that the average profit among those 55 percent was $2,771,000. Of the 45 percent reporting a deficit, the average deficit was $638,000.

In 1993-94, Georgia's women's gymnastics team averaged total attendance of 8,638 per meet while its men's basketball team averaged paid attendance of 7,718 per game.

Opinions

Fresh approach could aid coaches

Tom Shatel, columnist
Omaha World-Herald

"Coaches can't change total public perception any more than they can edit every writer's story before it goes to print. What they can change is how they deal with it.

"The perception of big-time college (basketball) coaches has never been worse. The National Association of Basketball Coaches has to change that. Hiring a public relations firm or person might be a good idea. Here's where it could start:

"(1) There are hundreds of coaches who are teaching, recruiting and competing and doing it right. They have an impact in their communities. They are respected members of their field. Their stories need to be told....

"(2) Stop the whining and the annoying 'no respect' broken record....Coaches get no respect? Guess why. The NABC should discipline its members for the antics and tirades that so damage their credibility.

"(3) Get organized. It appears the coaches and the NCAA have stopped their feuding and are about to enter a period of constructive dialogue. Fantastic. The NABC, like college football's CFA, ought to have a stronger voice at the NCAA Convention. Maybe an annual 'issues summit' like last fall is necessary. The excuse that the NCAA Convention falls in January no longer works. Designate a representative to make the trip each year."

Minorities in baseball

Skip Bertman, baseball coach
Louisiana State University
New Orleans Times-Picayune

"People don't realize that the black population of the United States is only 12 percent to begin with. Most of that population is concentrated in the inner cities, and they're not exposed to the youth league baseball opportunities as much as the white kids in the suburbs.

"The average for a kid today to play youth league baseball is $80. The cost has turned it into a country club sport just like golf and tennis. It's unfortunate but true."

Roger Cadon, baseball coach
Southern University, Baton Rouge
New Orleans Times-Picayune

"One of the things that happened since integration is there's a lack of understanding and communication that is causing black kids not to play baseball. The best athletes are not playing because the coaches don't understand them."

Bowl expenses

Ivan Maisel, columnist
The Sporting News

"The bowls make much of the fact that they pay $70 million to schools. But much less than that actually ends up in the coffers of athletic departments.

"For instance, bowls direct their visiting teams to pricey hotels for a guaranteed number of nights. Nebraska, for instance, needed 230 rooms for five to 10 nights at $145 per night. That's $33,000 per night (before taxes) for beds. That's one of the reasons why the Cornhuskers spent $1.2 million going to the Orange Bowl.

"And Nebraska is one of the schools that watches its bowl money carefully. In the last two years, the university actually has trimmed nonessential spending by 20 percent, assistant athletics director Gary Fouraker says.

"A good definition of nonessential expenditures lies within the traditional reasoning that a bowl game is a 'reward' for a good season.

"Athletics department employees, university officials and boosters join the fun, all on the school's tab. When they come home with their suntans, watches and snapshots, there's no money left for women's soccer."

Cheating

Homer Rice, director of athletics
Georgia Institute of Technology
The Atlanta Journal

"I've heard all of this talk that 'everybody does it' from Day 1 of my 50 years involved with athletics....

"Unless I've missed something through the years, that's not anywhere close to the case. I didn't believe it then, and I still don't believe it now. Unfortunately, the media has given that perception to the public, but (the media) isn't alone in doing that. When our presidents constantly talk about reform, it's like we (those involved with intercollegiate athletics) are automatically guilty of doing something wrong."

About athletes misrepresenting their experiences:

"Back when I was an NFL coach, there were two or three kids who told me what they said went on during their college days. Then, after a while, they admitted that they had a habit of stretching things and inventing things when it came to this subject. They'd hear one guy say what he got, and they'd feel they had to top that....

"Either the media has to stop reporting these stories (about recruiting and extra-benefit violations), which won't happen, or the NCAA has to have no rules at all, which also won't happen. That means we'll always have people out there saying, 'Everybody does it.' It's just unfortunate.' "

Baseball championship

Mark Marquess, baseball coach
Stanford University
The Dallas Morning News

"We won't ever have a true national tournament until we play at neutral (regional) sites."

Forty-one more summer basketball events certified

Another 41 summer basketball events have been certified in accordance with legislation regulating Division I men's and women's basketball coaches' attendance at camps.

In accordance with NCAA Bylaw 13.13.5, basketball coaches at Division I institutions may attend only institutional summer basketball camps as defined in Bylaw 13.13.1.1 and noninstitutional organized events held during the July evaluation period that are certified under Bylaw 30.15.

The Division I summer evaluation periods are July 5-31 for men and July 8-31 for women.

To date, 107 events have been certified by the Association. Other certified events were reported in the April 20 and 27 and May 4, 11, 18 and 25 issues of The NCAA News.

In a related matter, the name of an event previously certified by the Association has been changed. The Summer Sweet Sixteen event July 30-31 has changed its name to Southern California Summer Showdown. That event will be at Lakewood High School in Huntington Beach, California.

Also, a Women's Basketball Coaches Association-sponsored event at the Woodward Academy was listed with an incorrect name in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News. The event's name is WBCA Mideast Summer Camp.

More information about certification of events can be obtained from Christopher D. Schoemann, NCAA legislative assistant, at the national office.

Following are the 27 men's and 14 women's events certified most recently, with sites and dates of camps and names, addresses and telephone numbers of principal owners or operators.

Product liability

product liability litigation. Product liability doesn't mean defective or hazardous products, or negligence on the part of the manufacturer. Product liability means something completely different.

To Schutt Sports Group, it means placing three warning labels on every helmet, another on the face guard and warning statements on each catalog page of advertisement dealing with football, yet still being sued for "failure to warn." It means being sued in cases where our company did not even manufacture the helmet but only bought some assets of the original manufacturer. It means being forced to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal fees and countless weeks to "win" lawsuits that rarely are based on the performance of the products we manufacture.

Clearly, product liability also diverts potential investment resources.

The money we in the industry are forced to devote to legal defense could be spent more productively elsewhere, including research and development, which is essential to the innovation in sporting goods equipment that no doubt helps our industry and ultimately increase jobs.

Simply put, product liability stifles innovation. During a 1991 Senate Small Business Committee hearing, a witness from the Foster-Miller consulting firm testified that his company turned down contracts to supply materials to produce football and ice hockey helmets. His comment was that joint liability simply put his company at too much risk.

Needless to say, product liability needs to be fixed. We need to put some reason into law. In its current form, it is out of kilter and encourages lawsuits that don't help anyone. When manufacturers successfully defend a lawsuit, everyone loses. The plaintiffs lose, but the manufacturers lose, also. You cannot spend hundreds of thousands of dollars unproductively and not suffer. The industry's employees lose. Our customers lose.

Product liability concerns plague the entire sports industry. Whether it's softball, exercise bike or pogo stick, product manufacturers are seen as the insurers of last resort for sports activities. What that ultimately may mean is less access to sports, which would be yet another manifestation of the cost of product liability in our society.

Julie Nimmons is chairman of the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association and president and chief executive officer of Schutt Sports Group, a Litchfield, Illinois-based company that represents AIR football helmets and shoulder pads, as well as Schutt face guards that are used by many college and high-school football teams. Nimmons has testified several times before the U.S. Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation on the issue of product liability.

■ Administrative Committee minutes

Conference No. 9
June 1, 1994

1. Acting for the NCAA Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Approved a recommendation from the Infractions Appeals Committee that it be allowed to adopt or revise enforcement policies and procedures in NCAA Bylaws 32.10 and 32.11 that relate directly to the infractions appeals process.

b. Appointed Todd Turner, director of athletics at North Carolina State University, to the Men's and Women's Golf Committee, representing men's golf interests, replacing Steve Sloan, who declined the appointment.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

Approved in principle the policy recommended by the Communications Committee relative to the methods used to determine coaches' career records; but suggested editorial revisions be made to clarify the intent of the policy.

3. Report of actions taken by the NCAA executive director per Constitution 4.3.2. Acting for the Council:

Approved 38 summer basketball leagues (21 for men, 12 for women and five for both men and women) per Bylaws 14.7.5.2 and 30.14, as reported in issues of The NCAA News.

As expected: Favorites win again in I men's, women's track

Louisiana State women make it eight in a row

It hasn't yet gotten to the point where opponents are willing to concede the Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships team title to Louisiana State before the meet begins, but some may be thinking of doing so.

The Tigers recorded four first-place finishes and totaled 86 points — including 53 on the last day — to double the score on runner-up

Texas (43) and win its eighth consecutive NCAA Division I outdoor championship June 1-4 at Boise State.

UCLA placed third with 42 points, followed by Villanova (39) and Tennessee (30).

Boise State drew a championships-record crowd of 34,816, including 10,493 on the final day. The previous record was 32,000-plus in 1984 at Eugene, Oregon.

Debbie Parris, Gai Kapernick and Danyel Mitchell won the 400-meter hurdles, high jump and discus throw, respectively, and Louisiana State also won the 400-meter relay to post the second-most lopsided victory in championships history. Louisiana State won the 1993 championship by 49 points.

"We had some age and some youth do it for us this year," said Louisiana State coach Pat Henry. "We had such a great opening day; I knew then that if we'd be consistent we'd be in pretty good shape."

Mitchell led the way, winning the discus throw and placing fourth in the shot put. Mitchell cruised to her second consecutive discus championship with a throw of 59.08 meters (193 feet, 10 inches) — more than 20 feet farther than runner-up Alana Preston of Tennessee.

Parris won her second consecutive hurdles title, crossing the finish line in 55.54 seconds. She joins Janeene Vickers of UCLA (who won three years in a row beginning in 1989) as the only individuals to win consecutive 400-meter hurdles championships.

In addition to winning four individual titles, the Tigers recorded five top-four showings. Cheryl Taplin and D'Andre Hill both finished in the top four in the 100- and 200-meter dashes, and Kim Carson placed second in the 100-meter hurdles.

Texas' Eileen Vanisi turned in the championships' only record-breaking performance, in the shot put. Vanisi won with a throw of 17.74 meters (58-2½), eclipsing the meet record of 17.60 (57-9) she set as a freshman in 1991.

"I wasn't worrying about anyone else. I was concentrating on myself," said Vanisi. "I'm happy because when I went in I wanted to be consistent with all my throws, and that's what happened."

In addition to Parris and Mitchell, repeat winners were Holli Hyche of Indiana State in the 100-meter dash, Carole Zajac of Villanova in the 10,000-meter run and Gillian Russell of Miami (Florida) in the 100-meter hurdles.

Zajac, who also earned a runner-up finish in the 5,000-meter run, is the only individual in championships history to win back-to-back 10,000-meter run titles.

Hyche and Russell, meanwhile, become only the second individuals to win consecutive championships in their events. Hyche, who also placed second in the 200-meter dash, joined Merlene Ottey of Nebraska (1982 and 1983) as the only repeat champions in the 100-meter dash.

Russell joined Benita Fitzgerald of Tennessee (1982 and 1983) as the only two-time champions in the 100-meter hurdles.

Louisiana State cruised to another team title with the help of Cheryl Taplin, who finished second in the 100-meter dash and fourth in the 200-meter dash.

Record-setting performance by Walder leads Razorbacks in men's competition

Erick Walder and Arkansas saved the best for last as the Razorbacks left the field behind and won their third consecutive NCAA Division I Men's Outdoor Track and Field Championships title June 1-4 at Boise State.

Inspired by record crowds at Bronco Stadium/Lyle Smith Field, Walder won the long-jump and triple-jump championships — the latter event on his final attempt — and the Razorbacks scored 54 points on the final day of competition.

Arkansas finished with 83 points — the highest since 1984, when Oregon scored 113 points. The Razorbacks finished 38 points ahead of runner-up UTEP — the biggest margin since 1988, when UCLA doubled up Texas (82 to 41).

Tennessee placed third with 38 points, while Georgia Tech (34) and Fresno State (28) finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

Boise State, hosting its first championships, broke marks of its own by drawing a championships-record crowd of 34,816, including 10,493 on the final day. The previous record was 32,000-plus in 1984 at Eugene, Oregon.

In winning both the long-jump and triple-jump titles, Walder became only the third individual to win both crowns in the same year. Clarence Robinson of New Mexico (1965) and Mike Conley of Arkansas (twice, in 1984 and 1985) are the others.

Walder also joined Edward Gordon of Iowa (1929 through 1931) as the only individuals to win three consecutive long-jump championships.

"I knew the team title was on the line and we needed 18 points badly," Walder said. "I dug down deep on my last jump and got it. I struggled in the early rounds, but thank God I pulled it out on the last jump."

While Walder was dominating the jumps, his teammates took control of the distance races, winning the 1,500-, 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs. Graham Hood won his first 1,500-meter crown, while Brian Baker and Teddy Mitchell took the 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs, respectively.

The meet produced a record-breaking performance in the javelin throw, where Todd Riech of Fresno State set a championships mark with a throw of 81.30 meters (266 feet, 9 inches). The title is the first for Riech, who beat the 1990 record of 80.92 (265-6) set by Patrik Boden of Texas.

The championships also produced several repeat champions, including Jose Parrilla and Randy Jenkins of Tennessee, Balazs Kiss of Southern California, and Brent Noon of Georgia.

Parrilla and Noon continued the dominance of their respective events, winning their third consecutive championships in the 800-meter run and shot put, respectively.

Parrilla joined Charles Hornbostel of Indiana (1932 through 1934) and John Woodruff of Pittsburgh (1937 through 1939) as the only individuals to win three consecutive 800-meter crowns, while Noon became the first since Karl Salb of Kansas (1969 through 1971) to win three consecutive shot-put championships.

"All I was thinking about is, I'll be part of history to do three," said Parrilla. "A lot of people (13) have done two. Not too many have done three. It's a great thing to be part of history."

Jenkins claimed his second consecutive high-jump crown, leaping 2.31 meters (7-7), while Kiss overcame an injury to win his second straight hammer-throw championship with a throw of 74.84 (245-6).

Justin Leonard of Texas shot 271 and won the individual competition by five strokes.

I men's golf championships painted Cardinal and white

Buoyed by William Yanagisawa's final-round 64, Stanford fought off a host of challengers to win the NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships team title June 1-4 in McKinney, Texas.

It was the Cardinal's first team golf championship since 1953 and seventh overall. Stanford's 23-under-par 1,129 total tied the championships record set by Arizona in 1992.

Yanagisawa's final round included an eagle on the par-5 16th hole that helped Stanford protect a four-shot advantage over runner-up Texas. Defending champion Florida finished third, followed by Arkansas and Oklahoma State.

Texas produced this year's medalist, as Justin Leonard became the Longhorns' first individual champion since Ben Crenshaw in 1973.

Leonard rolled in a 20-foot par putt on the final hole to cut Stanford's lead in the team competition. Moments later, though, Yanagisawa sank a long putt from the edge of the 16th green for the eagle that clinched the Cardinal victory.

Stanford took the lead after the second round on the strength of Notah Begay's record-setting 62. Begay was eight under par after 15 holes, then birdied the 16th and 18th holes to surpass the 63 set by Jim Begwin of Oklahoma in 1984 and Phil Mickelson of Arizona State in 1992.

"When I stepped up to the 18th, I was thinking about the triple bogey I had there in the first round," Begay said. "But I did not want to approach the hole scared."

Begay drained a 60-foot winding putt for the record.

Stanford's 273 in the second round was a school record and gave the Cardinal a two-shot lead over first-round leader Arkansas.

Georgia Tech caught the Cardinal after three rounds. Four other teams were within six shots, including Texas.

Leonard's third-round 63 put the Longhorns in position to challenge and gave him sole possession of the lead. Leonard then fired a final-round 69 to stave off Oklahoma State's Alan Bratton, who was a stroke behind Leonard entering the final round but shot a one-over-par 73 to finish five strokes back.

Leonard's 271 total also tied a championships record set by John Inman of North Carolina in 1984 and Mickelson in 1992. In addition to winning this year's championship, Leonard has won the 1992 U.S. Amateur championship and a record four consecutive Southwest Conference championships.

"I focused more on the team and what I could do to help our cause," Leonard said of his finishing round. "I just kept thinking about how many birdies I may need to help us win the championship."

Leonard's third-round 63 was one of nine rounds of 65 or better during the tournament. Mikko Rantanen of Georgia Tech tied Begay for the second-round lead after a 63, and Mark Swygert of Clemson, Stewart Cink of Georgia Tech, Donnie Darr of Kent and Oklahoma State's Trip Kuehne all shot 65 in the third round. Texas' Harrison Frazar, who scored a hole-in-one during the second round, shot a final-round 65.

"Heading into the tournament, we had no idea that we'd need 63s, 64s or 65s to win the championship," said Texas coach Jimmy Clayton. "I think we played great golf. This tournament was very good for collegiate golf, especially since it was on television (ESPN)."

Ninth-inning magic lifts Central Missouri State to II title

Ed Lunders capped a five-for-five afternoon with a ninth-inning triple that drove in the go-ahead run and sparked Central Missouri State to a 14-9 victory over Florida Southern and its first NCAA Division II Baseball Championship title.

Playing June 4 in Montgomery, Alabama, the Mules broke an 8-8 tie with six runs in the top of the ninth against Tom Szimanski, Florida Southern's top relief pitcher. Szimanski gave up five earned runs in one-third of an inning after allowing only two earned runs all season.

Florida Southern led, 4-0, after two innings and held a 6-2 lead after the fifth, but the Mules fought back with six runs in the top of the sixth inning for an 8-6 lead.

The rally came after Moccasins starter-turned-relief-pitcher David Harris hit Rick Ladjevich, who was named the player of the year in Division II by the American Baseball Coaches Association, and then walked Glenn Duckett. Four hits and two errors later, the Mules had an 8-6 lead.

Florida Southern scored in the sixth inning, then Danny Scolaro tied the game for Florida Southern in the bottom of the eighth with a run-scoring single.

Szimanski, who came into the game with seven saves and an 0.51 earned-run average, gave up a lead-off single to Duckett, who then scored on Lunders' triple. After Szimanski hit a batter and threw a wild pitch, the Mules drew two walks and cashed in with a double to take command of the game.

A fourth-place finish in 1974 was the highest finish for Central Missouri State in three previous championship-round appearances.

Florida Southern first baseman James Vida, who went 12-for-22 (.545) with 11 runs batted in and four home runs, was named the tournament's outstanding player.

in the governance."

Football playoff

During a panel discussion on the future of postseason football, Oklahoma athletics director Donnie Duncan said he believes it is premature for people to take sides on the issue until the matter has been sufficiently investigated.

"It's something of an unknown," Duncan said. "I can't define it. Consequently, I don't think any of us can say with convictions that we can say we are for it or against it. I'm not totally dissatisfied with what we have currently. I think our public wants more.

"I believe the financial side of it cannot be ignored. I do not make an apology for saying that financial considerations are worth being concerned about."

Duncan, who represents the NCAA Special Events Committee on the NCAA Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship, said the money earned in a playoff system not only could help financially troubled football programs, but also fund other programs throughout the athletics department.

"I think (the money) can impact some of the cuts you see in football," Duncan said. "What if we put that money in a graduation fund for men and women? What if we established a gender-equity fund?"

Others, however, were not enthusiastic about a playoff. Dennis Erickson, head football coach at the University of Miami (Florida), said he prefers the bowl system as it currently is configured. However, if a playoff is approved, Erickson said he would like to see it played after the bowl games.

"When you finish the regular season and you have a bowl game January 1, (student-athletes) have a chance to get ready for finals," Erickson said. "What I would like to see happen is (we) keep the bowl system, take the top four teams and play a playoff after the bowls. I would support that."

"It seems to me that there is an awful lot (that is) 'right' about the bowl system," said John Reid, executive director of the Thrifty Car Rental Holiday Bowl. "I'll grant you the fact that there is policing that needs to be done. But 19 bowl games produce 38 winners. Those winners can go back to their campuses and sell tickets and promote their programs. There's a lot (that is) right about the college football system. Let's keep it going."

Coaches and postseason

The football coaches who gathered for the meeting approved the following statement concerning postseason football:

"College football coaches believe that the opportunities provided by the bowl games are a fitting celebration of the sport. There is, however, concern about the organization of postseason football.

"The coaches enthusiastically and unanimously encourage the various bowl committees to join with college athletics administrators to develop a system that will enable college football to present its game under the most favorable conditions. A configuration that requires as many as four games to be played during the same time period penalizes the fans, the bowls and college football.

"College football today is more exciting and skilled than any time in its 125-year history. Coaches are interested in preserving the traditions associated with college football and, at the same time, desire to do what is necessary to promote and improve the sport. The benefits of some type of a college football playoff require considerable study to determine the impact on the sport and the bowl games and, most importantly, those who play the game.

"While such analysis requires more time, it is imperative that the current postseason system be adjusted so that the bowl games, which the coaches continue to appreciate, can maintain their prominent role in relation to college football."

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 3-5 meeting in Dallas, the College Football Association:

■ Announced that its athletics directors' group proposed that legislation be submitted for the 1995 NCAA Convention that would permit a 12th regular-season football game, beginning with the 1995 season. The group noted that there would be no change in the permissible playing and practice seasons for the sport. The directors indicated the additional football game would assist institutions in their efforts to promote athletics opportunities for all students. CFA faculty athletics representatives indicated opposition to a 12th game, while the football coaches' group took no formal position. "This looks like a way for us to generate revenue without prolonging the season," said C. William Byrne Jr., athletics director at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

■ Announced a list of legislative proposals that the football coaches' group supports for submission as proposed legislation. The coaches voted to propose legislation involving the contact rule that would make it permissible to use either a contact or an evaluation after December 1, limited to no more than one visit per week and a maximum of seven such visits. Also, the coaches expressed support for a proposal to eliminate the use of squad members at an institutional summer football camp; support for a proposal to prohibit graduating seniors from attending institutional football camps; support for a proposal to allow a student-athlete who is receiving athletically related financial aid in another sport to practice in football and be exempt from grants-in-aid limits for football until that individual participates in a game; and support for a proposal to enable a student-athlete who may have assumed status as a professional to receive institutional financial aid that would permit the individual to continue course work toward a degree. The coaches also recommended a proposal to allow an institution to employ three graduate assistant coaches, provided that at least one of the graduate assistants is an ethnic minority.

■ Announced support by the faculty athletics representatives' group for the existing satisfactory-progress rule — although there is concern about the administrative detail required to monitor academic progress — and for existing limitations on the use of summer-school credit for retaining eligibility.

■ Announced the 1993 recipients of the CFA's Hitachi Promise of Tomorrow postgraduate scholarships. One student from each of the 67 CFA member institutions received a $5,000 teaching scholarship. Recipients must be involved in the football program as a player, manager, trainer or coach, and the students must intend to pursue a career in education.

The recipients are J. Scott Brewer, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Brad A. Hogan, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Bryan W. Karkoska, Auburn University; Alexander C. Seventeen administrators receive NACDA awards for excellence

Seventeen longtime athletics administrators — including NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey — were honored June 6 as recipients of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) Awards for Administrative Excellence.

Administrators who have worked full-time during the 1994 calendar year for a conference or national association and have served a minimum of 20 years of continuous service in athletics administration were eligible for selection for the award by the NACDA Honors and Awards Committee.

An exception to those criteria was made for heads of coaching associations, because of the nature of those positions (frequently, such positions are held by retired coaches). In those cases, the committee reduced the required term of administrative service to 10 years of continuous service.

In addition to Dempsey, award recipients who were honored during the 29th annual NACDA convention in Marco Island, Florida, were Clayton W. Chapman, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference; Eugene F. Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference; James E. Delany, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference; Prentice Gautt, associate commissioner of the Big Eight Conference (and NCAA sec-

1994 Column No. 23

NCAA Bylaw 16.4.1
Permissible medical expenses

Institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.4.1-(i), it is permissible for institutions to provide surgical expenses to student-athletes (including partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers) who are injured during the academic year while participating in voluntary physical activities (e.g., voluntary weightlifting outside the institution's playing season) that will prepare them for competition. Thus, it is not permissible for an institution to finance surgical expenses to treat a student-athlete's illness or injury that is not a result of practice for or participation in intercollegiate athletics at the institution, or that does not occur during the academic year while the student-athlete is participating in voluntary physical activities to prepare the student-athlete for competition.

Also, in accordance with Bylaw 16.4.1-(j), it remains permissible for an institution to provide medication and physical therapy used by a student-athlete during the academic year to enable the individual to participate in intercollegiate athletics, regardless of whether the injury or illness is the result of intercollegiate competition or practice, or does not occur during the academic year while the student-athlete is participating in voluntary physical activities designed to prepare the student-athlete for competition.

Please note that it is permissible for a student-athlete to receive surgical expenses and expenses related to medication and physical therapy during the summer if the expenses are for medical treatment incurred by the student-athlete as a result of an athletically related injury that occurred during the academic year per Bylaw 16.4.1-(h) or 16.4.1-(i).

During its August 27, 1992, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee noted that, inasmuch as a student-athlete may not receive surgical expenses for an injury that occurs during the summer and may not receive expenses related to medication and physical therapy as a result of such an injury except during the academic year, it is not permissible for a prospect who has signed a National Letter of Intent and who is enrolled in the institution's summer term before initial, full-time enrollment to receive such expenses.

Colorado College placed on probation for one year

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the athletics program at Colorado College on probation for one year for violations of NCAA legislation concerning transportation and lodging of a prospective student-athlete in the men's ice hockey program, as well as other violations.

Colorado College, a Division III institution, competes in Division I men's ice hockey.

The Committee on Infractions found NCAA rules violations that took place during the 1992-93 school year, as reported by the institution, including:

■ The head men's ice hockey coach violated the provisions of NCAA ethical conduct standards by knowingly violating and failing to report violations of NCAA rules.

■ Impermissible tryout opportunities and transportation to enroll were provided to a prospective student-athlete.

■ Improper transportation and lodging was provided for a prospective student-athlete while he was on campus, including spending one night at the head coach's home.

■ A volunteer coach traveled with the ice hockey team during the 1992-93 season.

■ The restricted-earnings coach and the volunteer coach used courtesy automobiles.

The committee adopted the following penalties that were self-imposed by Colorado College:

■ Eliminated the volunteer coach position in men's ice hockey for at least one year.

■ Limited to eight the number of official visits for men's ice hockey for one year.

■ Limited to two the number of men's ice hockey coaches allowed to recruit off-campus for one year.

Colorado College took corrective actions, which were considered by the committee in imposing its penalties, including:

■ Required the head men's ice hockey coach to resign effective at the end of the 1992-93 ice hockey season.

■ Revised the athletics department handbook to clarify and expand information about recruiting policies, especially with regard to midyear recruiting.

■ Reviewed admissions procedures affecting Division I student-athletes to clarify what formal admission involves.

■ Eliminated the use of courtesy cars by coaches beginning with the 1993-94 ice hockey season.

The committee imposed the following additional penalties:

■ Placing the university on probation for one year and requiring the implementation of a comprehensive athletics compliance education program.

■ Requiring recertification of current athletics policies and practices.

■ Requiring that during a one-year period, any NCAA institution that employs the former head men's ice hockey coach in an athletically related position must appear with him before the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

As required by NCAA legislation for any institution in a major infractions case, Colorado College is subject to the NCAA's repeat-violator provisions for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case. If Colorado College does not appeal the penalties, they will take affect 15 days from the date of the report or on the date that the college accepts the penalties, whichever comes first. Colorado College has 15 days in which to file an appeal.

The members of the Committee on Infractions who heard this case are Richard J. Dunn, associate dean of the college of arts and sciences, University of Washington; Jack H. Friedenthal, dean of the school of law, George Washington University; Roy F. Kramer, commissioner, Southeastern Conference; Frederick B. Lacey, attorney, LeBoeuf, Lamb, Leiby and MacRae, and a retired judge; Beverly E. Ledbetter, vice-president and general counsel, Brown University; James L. Richmond, retired judge and attorney; Yvonne (Bonnie) L. Slatton, chair of the department of physical education and sports studies, University of Iowa; and committee chair David Swank, professor of law, University of Oklahoma.

The complete public report from the Committee on Infractions will be published in the June 29 edition of The NCAA Register (a supplement to The NCAA News).

Oklahoma resolution seeks to abolish use of clearinghouse

The Oklahoma Legislature has passed a resolution that asks the U.S. Congress to prohibit the NCAA from requiring student-athletes to use a clearinghouse to establish initial eligibility in Divisions I and II sports.

The resolution was passed by the Oklahoma Senate May 27, along with a concurrent resolution asking other state legislatures to pass legislation memorializing Congress to prohibit the clearinghouse.

The NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse was created by a vote of the 1993 NCAA Convention. It is designed to eliminate duplication of effort for high-school counselors (who no longer will have to send copies of records to several colleges) and also to provide a single version of whether a prospective student-athlete is academically eligible as determined by grade-point average, standardized test scores and core courses.

An $18 charge is required of each student-athlete registering with the clearinghouse, although waivers are available to those who cannot afford the fee. That fee has been the most criticized part of the clearinghouse arrangement and has led some, including State Rep. Gary Bastin, the sponsor of the Oklahoma resolution, to conclude that the NCAA is profiting from the program.

However, the Association contributes about $500,000 annually to the operation of the clearinghouse, which (based on registration by about 100,000 athletes) is estimated to cost about $2.3 million annually to operate.

The conclusion of the resolution states: "Now, therefore, be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the 2nd session of the 44th Oklahoma Legislature, the Senate concurring therein: That the Oklahoma Legislature memorializes the United States Congress to pass legislation prohibiting the National Collegiate Athletic Association and other athletic associations from requiring students planning to enroll in college as freshmen and wanting to participate in Division I or Division II sports to apply through their clearinghouse and pay for such services."

Playoff

April, a research group compiled a major report that formed the basis of the committee's examination of the matter.

Young said there is little likelihood of football-playoff legislation at the January NCAA Convention. "The timetable would preclude that," he said. "It's not absolutely out of the question, but that's not what we have in mind."

Instead, the committee, which was to have been dissolved at the conclusion of this meeting, will ask the NCAA Joint Policy Board for an extension at the policy board's June 26-27 meeting in Kansas City. Assuming such an extension is granted, Young said a task force of the special committee's members would be assembled to study related issues before the full committee reconvenes.

The sense is that more than one additional meeting would be required, making it all but impossible to meet the NCAA's legislative deadlines. The final date for submission of legislation by the Council is September 1, but the last meeting of the Presidents Commission before that date is June 28-29.

Young characterized the meetings to date as "the most extensive review of the possibilities of a Division I-A playoff that the Association has embarked upon." He stressed the commitment to involve the membership "in the broadest sense," noting the inclusion of student-athletes, coaches and conference commissioners on the committee.

He also cited "the constant struggle" to balance what is in the best interests of the student-athlete with the challenge of finding new sources of revenue and meeting a test of Division I membership: to be as self-sufficient as possible.

NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey said the committee put substantial time and effort into looking at the impact on student-athletes, including financial, academic and personal factors. "We listened to their concerns about additional time demands, exam schedules, the length of the season and ways that student-athletes might receive direct benefits in addition to an athletics scholarship. These issues must be resolved satisfactorily before we can make any further recommendations."

The committee identified other issues that were reviewed but were not fully resolved in the time available. Those issues included revenue distribution, playoff format and impact on bowl games.

In a news conference at the conclusion of the meeting, Young and Dempsey both declined to acknowledge the inevitability of a I-A playoff. "The committee is not prepared to take that position at this time," Dempsey said. Young was asked if a vote was inevitable and said, "I don't believe so. Others may feel differently."

Young also noted activity among Division I-A conference commissioners regarding changes in the bowl alliance.

"We were all clearly aware of efforts by commissioners on part of the coalition," Young said. "There is a need for modification, and current movements are in the right direction."
